Kim Kardashian never seems to have any down time.

The reality star just got back from a busy trip to Dubai and last night she got glammed up to attend the 2011 Angel Ball at Cipriani Wall Street in New York City on Monday night.

The 30-year-old who is currently filming a new season of "Kourtney and Kim Take New York" was at the event for Gabrielle's Angel Foundation for Cancer Research to pay tribute to her late father, Robert Kardashian, who died in 2003 from throat cancer.

Kim eagerly tweeted her plans for the night:

"Heading to The Angel Ball with @lala! Its an event for cancer research, can't wait to share my story tonight & honor my dad!"

And even though Kim was busy honoring her father, she still found time to support another family member. Kim made sure to tweet support for her brother Rob, who was competing once again on "Dancing With The Stars."

In multiple tweets the one time "DWTS" contestant tried to rally fans to vote for her brother:
"OMG @RobKardashian just did such an amazing job!!!! VOTE VOTE VOTE 800 868 3402."
