GABRIELLE'S
ANGEL FOUNDATION
FOR CANCER RESEARCH

Our Objective

Gabrielle's Angel Foundation funds the best and brightest early career scientists focused on finding better treatments, preventions and cures for patients with leukemia, lymphoma and other blood cancers.

We are proud to have given grants totaling over $45 million in global giving.

We fund translational research that has the potential to go from 'the bench to the bedside' within a 5 year period and on average 88% of every dollar funds our research programs.

The Night

Gabrielle's Angel Foundation for Cancer Research's annual gala, The Angel Ball, is a star-studded evening known for its amazing live entertainment and celebrity participants. The Angel Ball honors exceptional individuals who have made significant humanitarian and philanthropic contributions in support of cancer research.

In 2025, the Foundation honored three outstanding philanthropists, Tina Knowles, Skye & Rufus Hankey and Amy Green. Dinner Chairs included Simone I. Smith, Lorraine Schwartz and Ofira Sandberg. The event, which raised $3 million for cancer research, was hosted by Gayle King and featured performances by Patti LaBelle, Montego Glover, Paul Russell and Ja Rule.

The Angel Ball 2026 date will be announced soon!

The Red Carpet

The Angel Ball is a high energy charity event featuring spectacular performers and presenters! The Gala attracts a global audience of prominent, high-net-worth supporters, celebrities, influencers, executives and philanthropists.

Blue Ivy Is a Princess in a Pink Gown and Diamonds on a Night Out With Grandmother Tina Knowles

Her feather boa was the cherry on top

BY ROSA SANCHEZ | PUBLISHED: OCT 28, 2025 8:06 AM EDT

Led by a family of strong women, Blue Ivy Carter is growing fully into herself and her glamorous personal style. The teen daughter of Beyoncé and Jay-Z stepped to New York City's Cipriani Wall Street to attend the Angel Ball, which raises money for blood cancer research.

To honor the theme of the night, Blue slipped on a pretty, satin baby-pink gown and strings of diamonds. The dress had thick shoulder straps and a fitted, corset-like bodice. The teen wore it with a matching light pink feather boa that she draped over her arms, plus diamond stud earrings and a layered diamond necklace. Silver eyeshadow, a black cat eye, a lined bottom lip, and the most beautiful velvet pink kitten heels completed her look.

The 13-year-old attended the charity gala with grandmother Tina Knowles, who was honored at the event for her extraordinary impact and continue our mission to find the future of cancer research."

Gabrielle Rich Aouad

Gabrielle was a champion skier, an expert in horseback riding, a skilled mountain climber, fluent in five languages, loving wife and daughter, internationally successful actress and future screenplay writer.

At the age of 23 she was diagnosed with advanced stage Hodgkin's disease. After successful treatment, her cancer returned and in May of 1996 she was diagnosed with Acute Myelogenous Leukemia (AML); once more she was treated with chemotherapy.

After going into remission for the second time, she was due for a bone marrow transplant so her mother Denise, donated her bone marrow to try to save Gabrielle's life. Gabrielle Rich Aouad passed away in the fall of 1996 at the tender age of 27.

Gabrielle's final wish was to create a foundation that would help spare others the suffering that she endured. One of its goals would be to invest in research for better treatments for leukemia so that others would not have to suffer from the side effects and damage of chemotherapy and radiation.

"Love defies all pain, even death"
